The Papers of the Algonquian Conference/Actes du congrès des Algonquinistes have just completed 11 years of publication, beginning with the Papers of the Sixth Algonquian Conference published in 1975, and including the current Papers of the Sixteenth Algonquian Conference being published in 1985. The papers of the first five Algonquian Conferences were not published as a group, although individual papers were published in various places, and the linguistic papers only of the 1973 conference were published in Studies in Linguistics. The Papers of the Sixth Algonquian Conference were published by the National Museum of Man, in their Mercury Series; the remaining Papers have been published by Carleton University. All the published papers have been edited by William Cowan. A complete listing of each volume is as follows:

The time has come to have an index of the articles which have appeared in these pages for the past 11 years, including the present volume. The cumulative index has been arranged alphabetically by author, and chronologically in the case of more than one entry under an author’s name. Since the editor and the book title are constant for all issues, these elements have been omitted from the listing.

It is hoped that this index will be of use and interest to the many readers and contributors to the Papers of the Algonquian Conference/Actes du congrès des Algonquinistes.
